

Inpatient Rehabilitation Facilities

Inpatient rehabilitation Facilities provide intensive rehabilitation through physical, occupational, and speech therapy. The goal is to improve functions affected by a disabling illness or disease. Inpatient Rehab is much more intensive rehabilitation than a skilled nursing facility or home-based rehabilitation services. Admitted patients must be able to tolerate three hours of intense rehabilitation services per day.

Following the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, DRH Health wants to assure you that you have choices in the selection of an inpatient rehabilitation facility. The facilities listed on the back of this sheet have indicated that they are currently accepting new patients.
